DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 1 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Heineck et al. (Heineck), U.S. Patent No. 5,519,759, previously used, in view of well known prior art.

Regarding claim 1, Heineck discloses in a wireless communication system comprising a base station connected with a mobile unit, a method of synchronizing at least one neighboring Base Station to the Base Station connected with the mobile unit comprising:

from the base station connected with the mobile unit (i.e., reads on wireless communication unit in the communication range of base station), sending call parameters (i.e., reads on start information or radio transmission conditions) and rough synchronization information (i.e., reads on synchronization information) to the at least one neighboring base station (col. 6, lines 28-31 and col. 7, lines 25-55 and col. 8, lines 57-65); and at the at least one neighboring base station, inherently monitoring transmissions (i.e., reads on able to receive synchronization information) of at least one of:

the base station connected with the mobile unit (col. 6, lines 28-31); the mobile unit; and a beacon signal from a beacon transmitter which is within range of the at least one neighboring base station and the base station connected with the mobile unit.

Heineck fails to explicitly disclose monitoring transmissions of the base station connected with the mobile unit.

However, at the time of the invention it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Heineck to include active monitoring of a communication session between the base station and mobile since the base stations are synchronized such that they are able to communication with a wireless communication terminal equipment, although not shown (see col. 6, lines 27-61).

Regarding claim 2, Heineck further discloses a method, according to claim 1, wherein the mobile unit is a device selected from the group consisting of: telephone handset, standard cordless telephone handset (i.e., reads on terminal equipment for use with DECT Standard) (see col. 3, lines 35-52); cellular telephone handset (i.e., wireless communication terminal equipment) (see col. 6, lines 6, lines 28-31), personal data device, personal digital assistant (PDA), computer, laptop computer, e-mail server, a device utilizing point-to-point protocol (PPP) to the Internet via a central remote access server, a headset, a personal server, a wearable computer, a wireless camera, and a mobile music player.

Art Unit: 2686

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 3-8 are allowed.
5. Claims 9 and 10 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
